The Scene Thursday Was too borrible to give even a faint description of. Seven bodies in various stages of decomposition were lying in the ground by the side of their open graves, their skulls broken in and their throats cut Irom car to ear, except the girl, eighteen months old, who must have been strangled or else thrown into her grave alive. She was in full dress, as her grandmother had dressed her that morning. She was in the bottom of the grave, and her father was lying upon her. This sign called in their victims. In the floor near the stove was a trap door, two feet square, which opens into a rude hols in the ground, seven feet deep, six feet wide at top, and three feet at the bottom. The earth outside of the house does not show any sign of exca bation. Into this horrible hole was plunged

The premises still goes on, and what may set be developed none can tell, but the people are prepared for anything. In an old Bible which was found in the house, and on the family-record page, was written in German the following memoranda. "Big slang-ter day. Jan. eighth (48.)" And another which read; "Hall departed." These were interpreted by a German citizen who was present yesterday.

A Catholic Prayer Book Was also found in the house which contained the following, written in German: "Johanna Bender, born July 20, 1848. John Gebardt, came to America July 1st 18.—." T. Strange Esq.,

The deputy prosecuting attorney of Labette county, appeared on the ground at the beginning of the search, and for some time insisted on all the rules of "red tape," and did not want anything done until the coroner and other officials came. His desires were overruled very decidedly, and speedily the examination proceeded. Great excitement prevails all over the country, and a strong effort is being made to discover this family of murderers.
